Impressive. Elegant. Affluent. Exclusive.

Creating custom ironwork is a skill that comes naturally to Compass Ironworks' owner Amos Glick and his talented team of artisans. They design and craft impressive staircase railings, balconies, terraces, estate gates and perimeter fencing throughout the Delaware Valley and beyond.

Compass Ironworks takes pride in the fine craftsmanship and detailed appointments involved in welding each piece, and this smart attention to detail is evident in the remarkable results.

"The process of creating custom pieces starts with the initial consultation," Glick explains. "First and foremost, I ask clients what kind of vision they have, what type of character they want to come across, their likes and dislikes, and then I work from that."

The knowledge and expertise of the Compass Ironworks team combined with its many years of experience working with affluent and exceptional high-end clients helps, too, with the decision-making process. By listening carefully to what clients say, they are able to offer advice and make suggestions. Case in point: the elegant window balconies and stair railings that Compass Ironworks created throughout the sprawling estate of Eagles' star Jon Runyan and his wife, Loretta. Glick recalls that Loretta had specific ideas of what she liked and disliked, and chose various elements to complement one another, as well as the décor of each room that graces the view of a railing.

Because of the unique intricacies of each Compass Ironworks' design and the fact that most of the work is done off-site, measurement must be precise. Every angle, slope, scrollwork and radius is particular to its own setting, so accuracy is imperative. The finished process includes a baked powder coat that is applied electrostatically and is extremely durable.

When all is said and done and the ironwork is in place—balanced and in harmony within its setting—clients end up satisfied and happy with the customized results. And the artisans at Compass Ironworks continue to take pride in creating outstanding and sophisticated pieces. It's a win-win situation.

Compass Ironworks is located at 1406 W. Kings Highway, Gap, PA. For more information, to discuss your ideas, or to schedule a free consultation with owner Amos Glick, call 717-442-4544.
